A Foundation.

Every one knows about the man who built his house upon the sand and the man who built his upon the rock. What was true then is also true today. The first thing to be considered in the construction of a building is a solid foundation. The next of most importance is to secure the best materials for its construction—materials that have no flaws and contain no adulteration. This applies most strongly to paint. The Colonial Paint is 100 per cent pure—not one ounce of adulteration can be found in it. Every package bears our state chemist's report. C. A. Heath, agent, Barre, Vt.

WILL TRY TO REBUILD A MAN

Omaha to Equip Victim of Whiskey With Artificial Fingers.

The Douglas county commissioners in Nebraska are going to try the experiment of rebuilding a man in the hope of ridding themselves of a county charge, says an Omaha dispatch to the Chicago Inter Ocean.

John Wiese of Millard came before them recently minus eight fingers, but well equipped with arguments why the county should provide him a new set of digits.

"I'm no good as I am," he protested, holding up two stumps of hands for inspection. "But if the board will fit me out with artificial fingers I can make a good living."

Wiese explained that with celluloid fingers he can milk cows, pick fruit, handle a pitchfork or a spade or even sew tidies if necessary.

"The fingers will cost $50," he said, "but if you don't buy them you'll have to keep me at the poor farm, and board and lodging will be even more expensive."

"The idea makes a bit with me," acknowledged Commissioner Harte, "because there will be at least one of the people out at the poor farm who can't plead inability to work on account of blistered fingers. Let's spend the $50."

Wiese used to live at Millard. One freezing night last winter he fell by the wayside returning home and was badly frostbitten. All his fingers were lost. Wiese has pending in the district court a $20,000 suit against four saloon men at Millard for selling him the liquor that resulted in his being frozen.

Beards and Russians are very uncommon. Nearly every man wears a beard. At one time it was the general belief in Russia that a beardless man was soulless.
